Business Basic Phone Company is a retailer of mobile phones. Most of its products have been sold to customers 25 years of age and over, mainly for business purposes. Its product range, promotion and pricing strategies are tailored to appeal to business organisations.

Business Basic Phone Company has retail outlets in major shopping centres. Customers need to come to the shop to purchase products and pay accounts. Its employees are mainly permanent, working 9.00 am–5.00 pm, with some casual staff employed on weekends and for late-night trading on Thursdays.

In recent years there has been:
• increasing competition in the mobile phone market;
• changes in the type of consumers buying mobile phones;
• changing expectations for mobile phone products and services; and
• changing retailing methods, such as web-based marketing of mobile phones.

These changes have forced Business Basic Phone Company to seek the advice of a consultant about the directions the business needs to take if it is to remain competitive.

You have been engaged as a consultant by the managing director of Business Basic Phone Company to prepare a report for the Board.

In your report: propose a marketing strategy that would enable the business to expand its market share; explain the impact of this new strategy on effective employment relations; and recommend strategies for managing this change effectively.
