Australian visions is the study of Australia and its views, ~~in~~ Douglas Stewart is a poet writer who focuses his poems on nature and the beauty that goes on. In his poem ~~'Lact Feeding the~~ 'lact feeding the cat' Douglas ~~speaks~~ speaks about a lady who is poor and old, this is shown in the first stanza "shuffling along in her broken shoes", ~~in the slum~~ the ~~first~~ first stanza is highly descriptive, the effect of ~~to~~ this is that it makes the audience visualize the lady ^{as being old and poor}. The lady is looked down by society but to the "villainous cats" she feeds everyday ~~is~~ she is seen ~~as~~ as a "Princess out of a tower" this influences the perception of Australia as a country who are very good even though they are looked down by society. In the last line 'But gracious and sweet it is to be the queen of the cats' we see that there is an extended metaphor, the lady has progressed from being a ~~lady~~ ^{a princess} to being the queen, the effect of this is that she is more than an old lady.

Douglas Stewart's Cave Painting poem influences perceptions of Australia because it is about aboriginals who lived in this country. This is evident in the first line "Black hands on the cave wall" and through out the poem. In ~~the~~ ~~the~~ ~~last~~ line last line in the first stanza look "and here we camped", and here we shall be ~~remembered~~ remembered" the use of imperative "look here" and the use of pronoun "we" symbolically means that we are all connected together, this influences the perception of Australia as a country who remembers their past and work to be better.

The poem 'The Snow Gum' is about a gum tree, that is covered by snow, Stewart catches an ironic vision of an Australian tree in "noone blue". Stewart uses personification - "Perfect lies its shadow" this gives the tree human characteristics and how it is "perforating its slow miracle" there is also simile "like flakes of soft grey stone" the effect of this is to compare the tree to a soft grey stone. This influences perception of Australia as a beautiful country with amazing ~~scenes~~ scenes that are ~~perfect~~ perfect.
