Why does this poem continue to appeal to people's emotions? In your response, reflect on the content, theme and language of the poem. Write 200–250 words in ENGLISH.

This poem continues to appeal to people's emotions for numerous reasons. Most people in the world know the disaster caused by human, the drop of atomic bomb in Hiroshima. This is the main theme that is issued in this poem. A girl that was only seven has died for no reason in that Hiroshima on that day. She is appealing herself everywhere but no one can really see her. Every word of her is something descriptive in a sad way expressing what she has gone through and what she is right now. The third paragraph is written about the moment of her death. The flames swallowing her and how she had ended up in ashes. And as the fourth and the fifth paragraph also express her feelings towards the world now how the world should be like. It should be a place where we can relax and people who read this poem should understand what the world was like for her and drop tears for her. And one of the biggest impact I had and people should have is written in the first paragraph. The first sentence "Please open, as I knock" should ^{change} ~~put~~ people's mood straight away. And as it follows on how she knocks everywhere, we start to get an idea of what she is like right at this moment. But her innocent death will be the biggest impact on readers.
