The right to vote has been entrenched into the Australian Constitution. This act has consequences that each individual over the age of 18 has the right and obligation to vote at federal and state elections. As this right is in the constitution it is enforced and no individual can attempt to deny anybody this right. Furthermore the only possible way this right can be nullified and struck is by having a referendum by the public and there must be a greater percentage in support of the removal of this right for it to happen.
