

Section 1 - Question 16, Criminal Justice.

a) I believe that Aboriginal people are over represented in the criminal justice system because they have a higher criminal rating to non-indigenous Australians. Aboriginal people ~~are~~ have a higher population in the criminal justice system and this mostly comes from their history, as back when Australia was less evolved, Aboriginal people were not given the right to work, ~~go to~~ be employed or able to even enter some shops, which drove them to theft as they weren't given the right to access some things that they needed, like food, water, clothing or even shelter, ~~so they~~ which would ~~and~~ of built some kind of frustration that would lead to rebellion of the laws in place and put Aboriginal people high up in the criminal justice system.

Now days, some aboriginal people are still unemployed, which means no money for things that they need, some indigenous children, grow up in bad communities where criminal actions are a normal thing and they then given the impression that its okay to be apart of that kind of thing ~~or~~ or they just grow up around it and have been apart of it so long that they just can't help but commit crimes as they don't know ~~and~~ how to, and can't help themselves.

Additional writing space on back page.