Why may so Aboriginal people be willing to participate in community consultation? (a)

Aboriginal people may be "willing to participate in community consultation because they may be tired of being judged and being outspoken of how people think. It takes a lot of courage to stand up and say what you really feel.

Back in the day many Aboriginal people were ashamed and afraid to say what they feel cause they were too busy being abused of what they looked ~~like~~ liked and how ~~they~~ they were spoken to and treated.

If you had said something that was either bad or good you would still get punished no matter what, and ~~even~~ even though society has changed maybe they are still afraid to say something because they are scared of what will happen to them or there family.
