~~Preston Campbell~~

Country is important to Aboriginal people throughout the world because everything they know about their ancestors they learned on the land by their parent that was passed on through generation through generation right on today, its also important to the indigenous because it is where they was born their parent and also grand-parents was born. &

Sacred grounds where Aboriginal people had celebration and more handprints from thousands to million of years ago of their tribal life is and always has been.

Land being important towards Indigenous people are unexplainable because the life of their heritage goes back past their grand parents years of living on and off the land
