2012 HSC - Aboriginal Studies

Band 2/3

Sample 1 Question 13(b)

Some strategies to improve Indigenous educational outcomes have been more successful as have had more fundings, more children willing to try something new even the extra pair of hands to help out. This can also be the case with the New Zealand education system as these are both struggling communities just trying to provide better education for their young generations.

Governments need to be more patient with the communities and provide them with what's necessary to teach the children.

The children need to try for themselves also and ~~even~~ listen to what's been taught to them.

Both Australian Indigenous and NZ Indigenous communities have the same goals for the young generations and want their education to be the best.
