

Start here.

When asking indigenous people information used in a research plan or assessment legal document are required, to ensure the information given is not false and of a cultural standard. Using ethical research is a safe way to be accurate on how true the information is. This is also a sign of respect that you are trusted with the knowledge given will remain untouched and changed to a different type preventing copyright of provided information.