

b) The student should use ethical research practices because it's a big part of Aboriginal peoples.

The student should definitely show respect because of their culture because it's a very important part of their life and they feel as though if you don't respect it they won't respect you.

The student should also ask permission to interview or ask questions about their culture or lives as they might have sacred stories or possessions in their family backgrounds.

The student should use this information because it's important to the Aboriginal community and they like to share their culture and identity to people that are interested in and want or enjoy hearing or learning about it. The student should use the ethical information because it tells people what Aboriginal peoples' lives are like and what they go through and how they get treated by others.
