

Start here.

a) Aboriginal people's health status is slowly improving although there is still a lot of work to be done.

Indigenous people are 10-20 years below the life expectancy of non-Indigenous people.

Today, Indigenous people are 62% more likely to get diabetes and kidney problems.

This is due to the fast food and unhealthy food Indigenous people are buying as it becomes more normal in today's society.

From eating fast food, they are more likely to get diseases, ~~and~~ ^{diabetes} and heart problems because their metabolism is designed for bush tucker. Indigenous people's metabolism is geared for hunting and gathering natural foods and therefore their body cannot ~~do~~ ^{handle} the unhealthy fast foods. Their health status is very low and a lot more government funding is needed to educate Indigenous people how to eat healthy.