

Start here.

(a) For Aboriginal people, Country is more than a piece of land to them. They ~~do not~~ believe in 'Terra Nullius', meaning 'land belonging to no one'. To them, the land is sacred and deserves respect. When they were dispossessed of their land, they fought to get it back.

- To Gurindji Elder Vincent Lingiari, the passing over of the land by Prime Minister Gough Whitlam at Wattie Creek in 1975 was a sacred moment, and one that will be forever remembered in history.

✱