Question Number

Finding out what does an individual want or what does he/she wants to become what his/her will wants to be, can lead individuals to discovering themselves or this world. Usually or in some case curiosity or necessity in the essential part of this progress. This notion has been conveyed in the texts of Jane Harrison "Rainbow's End", "Stephen Daldry Billy Elliot" and "My Chinese identity by William Yang".

In the text Billy Elliot by Stephen Daldry at the gym where ~~he~~ Billy do his training and he's not feeling connected to that. But the next scene with long shot of Billy watching the girls dancing has driven Billy's curiosity about dance and seeing himself dancing. With the ~~close up~~ of medium shot of Billy dancing with girls shows that curiosity of him is letting him discovery about what he wants. The scene with the close up of his shot is symbolising his masculinity and to what social class he belongs to. Giving of ballet shoes to Billy symbolise no matter what gender you are dance is for everyone. Also, Mrs Wilkinson mentioning "wrong shoes" and give him the ballet shoes. Which is a discovery for Billy as well about the Ballet dancing that it's not limited to one gender.

In addition to that when Jackie Billy's father finds out his son is doing Ballet makes him angry at the gym behind bars watching billy. The use of close-up shot and those bars symbolise the barriers to understand his son doing that dance. For working class people dance is ~~so~~ something they think its for females and the settings of this film is in working class area ~~bricks~~ with big strong walls of bricks shows the masculinism and swearing throughout the film symbolise of being hard and tough. In of the scene both father and son having arguments about ballet the close-up shot of both characters shows the passion/ ~~at~~ interest of Billy and Jackie his anger towards dance and what Billy is doing. Lads do boxing and wrestling not freaking ballet" words of Jackie at that scene which anger facial expression shown with close-up shots. But Billy didn't give up at the gym when he finds out Billy dancing with Michael made him to dance in front of his father to show his passion, interest and the talent he got in dancing. At that Jackie had the necessity to go beyond the expectation of society to help his son so discovery of supporting his son as a father.

This scene has been shown through medium long shot and close-up shot

In the text rainbows End by Jane Harrison discovery through curiosity has been shown in Act one. When Errol meets Polly at having conversation outside of Polly's house the setting is ~~at the~~ the tip where rubbish are and all of sudden a sound of baby crying heard. Errol was curious is that "a baby inside" shows his curiosity to discovered but he was stopped by Polly he "my cousin's baby". Which was a a lie but Errol discovered something about Dolly and her place. In Act two the necessity of ^{Nan,} discovery about Errol that he's not the fisher she thinks he is. The setting dramatic setting among the crowd discovering about Errol, use of amuse expression "You are not!" emphasis their is need to discover about someone.

In the text "My Chinese identity" by "William Yang". The use of direct quote "Ching Chong Chinamen", shows how does he feels and this feeling leaded toward discovery of himself. The use of descriptive language to emphasis about the discovery "rich culture" "old civilisation" which shows the discovery and the necessity of discovery about his ~~inde~~ identity.

In conclusion, for discovering about the world and someone curiosity and necessity plays a vital role. Just like Billy Elliot father needs to support his son, the curiosity of Billy towards dance. In Rainbows End the necessity for Nan to discover about Errol the curiosity of Errol to find out and in last the necessity of William Yang to do discovery about himself.

The End.
