Distinctive visual could provide a variety of perspectives on the war world. Through "The Shoe-Thorn Sonata" by John Misto and "the poem" "Suicide in the trenches" by Siegfried Sassoon, an different perspective of the war was presented.

In "The Shoe-Thorn Sonata" by John Misto, an idea of war was shown differently, people might see war is a heroic thing, where people go fight for their country. The main character of this book, Sheila and Bridie were nurses ~~of the~~, they were captured by the Japanese and got forced to burn all their ~~diaries~~ diaries. In the story Bridie got a disease, her best friend Sheila had no choice except to beg the Japanese for some medicine. She tried to trade them a shoe horn for it, but Lipstick Lorry ~~had~~ does not accept it unless Sheila sleeps with him and ~~at least~~ of others. Through this we could tell that surviving in war isn't easy and she have to give away herself to help a friend to live.

An other perspective was shown in "Suicide in the trenches". at the start of the poem, it states "I once known a boy", ~~showing~~ using first person to show his personal feelings. He once knew him, but he was ~~at~~ dead, then we states "The hell was the youth". Showing that all the young men have gone to war, as their family also cheer for them.

In the end of this poem, ~~the~~ ~~from~~ another perspective on ~~the~~ world ~~is~~ shown

In conclusion, ~~the~~ another perspective of war is shown ~~and~~ through ~~the~~ these two ~~poem~~, text, "The Snow King Sonata" and "The Suicide in the trenches". ~~Which~~ Which shows the ~~false~~ false information about war, War was never an heroic thing, except giving yourself to death.
