

Start here.

Question 5

b)

Wild

Wilfred Owen's poetry portrays interesting ideas about loss by the seriousness in which it is written.

- Such as in 'Strange Meeting' when the soldier dies he ~~meets~~ meets another man in the after life who is friendly.

The other man turns out to be the enemy soldier that the man had killed the day before.

This portrays interesting ideas about loss as Wilfred Owen is trying to convey the message that while we fight with each other in life when we die do we don't all go to the same place?

- And in ~~the~~ his poem in ~~the~~

'The Next War', Owen tries to convey the message about loss that we fight for this one war because we seem to have the idea that this is "THE" war, the war to end all other wars, there's always going to be another war, the next war. We as a society are just ignorant to this fact and ignore it.

Additional writing space on back page.