there are many issues currently affecting the delivery of care in the aged care industry.

Not enough staff to put on for shifts.

Means less staff members on a shift which may need more staff to take care of the clients.

Short staffed.

The industry could respond to this issue by hiring more staff members more staff members to more clients so each client will get their needs to them sooner when needed.

Multicultural clients may have beliefs to see and speak to the same set staff members or same cultural belief backgrounds.

This causes problems for staff because they may have lack of staff on and too many clients to attend to.

Interpreters may need to be hired. Time consuming and sometimes hard to get.

These are 2 of the many issues that are currently affecting the delivery of care in the health and aged care industry.
