Communication resources that would be good to have for an online university would include access to webcams with audio so that you can ask or answer questions that you may have.

You could also use social media such as Facebook and create a group chat with the names of those ^{that belong} to the online university. You could also use Twitter as a form of communication.

If you are to use webcams, you should make sure that everybody knows what time they need to connect their camera which makes it easier to do it in one session.

Ways of which you could submit work may include email or Facebook. If the work is handwritten you can fax it or take a clear photo of the work then use email or Facebook to submit the work.

If you need to communicate in a team, make sure that you only have your webcam linked to those only in your team. This will make it easier for you to talk to your team.

Facebook is also another way you can communicate as either in a team or just one on one. Just make sure that the people's names are listed in your conversation. You can also create secret groups on facebook.

Additional writing space on back page.
