State sovereignty is when a nation state is able to make its own laws and govern its affairs and citizens without external interference. State sovereignty is able to resolve disputes regarding world order, as the states are in the United Nations. If the UN has requested that Nations take part in resolving the issues, then they will be willing to join in.

If there was an issue in another country and the UN needed assistance, since Australia is a part of the UN, then they would provide aid, whether it be financial or military aid. The United Nations main objective is to maintain world peace and avoid war.
