

The tension between community interests and individual rights and freedoms within the criminal justice system is quite high.

The community interests are interests that the community have as a whole. They all want the same thing.

Individual rights and freedoms are the rights of only one person. And that is an individual who wants only what that individual wants.

This is why there is tension because some people don't agree with the interests of the community and those are the people in the category of the individual rights and freedoms.

The people who are involved in the individual rights are the ones that have their own opinions on what happens and what goes on in the community.