~~When considering an individual's rights and freedoms within the criminal justice system, the community's interests must also be considered.~~

When considering an individual's rights and freedoms within the criminal justice system, the community's interests must also be considered. ^{outcomes} ~~Outcomes~~ on indictable criminal cases can be ~~be~~ influenced by many different aspects. An example of this would be media. When considering the verdict and punishment of a high profile criminal case, the judge may feel pressured by the media and take into consideration the community's interest. Although in most actions the judge would respect and uphold ^{the rights & freedoms of an} ~~the~~ individual being defended, prosecution may use this tool to their advantage, and support community interests when deciding the verdict. This emphasises tensions felt between community interests and an individual's rights and freedoms within the criminal justice system. In some cases, on receiving freedom from incarceration, individuals must undertake a new identity and location ~~to~~ in protection from the community. The safety of the community is ~~is~~ highly considered when deciding the ~~verdict~~ punishment of an individual ~~in~~ within a case.
